Then will she please--why, exactly what is it that you want of her? questioned the president, a trifle haughtily. Speech I chorused the Three. Will Miss Davis please speak to us? asked the president. At that a very tall girl who was ineffectually attempting to hide behind little Alice Waite was pulled and pushed to her feet, and amid a sudden silence began the funniest speech that most of the class of 19-had ever listened to; but it was not so much what she said as her inimitable drawling delivery and her lunging, awkward gestures that brought down the house. When she took her seat again, resolutely ignoring persistent cries of More! the class applauded her to the echo and elected her freshman debater by acclamation. It was wonderful what a change those twenty riotous minutes had made in the spirit of the class of 19-. For the first time in its history it was an enthusiastic, single-hearted unit, and to the credit of the Hill girls be it said that no one was more enthusiastic or joined in the applause with greater vigor than they. They had not meant to be autocratic--except three of them; they had simply acted according to their lights, or rather, their leaders lights. Now they understood how affairs could be conducted at Harding, and during the rest of the course they never entirely forgot or ignored the new method. To Betty s utter astonishment and consternation the...
