ALSACE-LORRAINE By George Wharton Edwards Contents The Lost Provinces The German Yoke Ferrette, a Toy Village Altkirch The Feast of the Pipers Mulhouse Colmar The Vineyards Fete Days and Customs Sainte Odile The Quaint Houses Dreien-Eguisheim Turckheim Thann Rosheim Metz Strassburg The Real Reason The Land of Tears Bibliography Index Excerpt from Foreword The one dominating purpose of the people of Alsace-Lorraine is their reunion with the mother country: France. A temporary or final autonomy for the Lost Provinces, this Land of Unshed Tears, is out of the question. The people do not want it. It would be most impracticable to establish it. They would not even discuss it. The people of Alsace-Lorraine consider themselves French and a part of France. The creation of even a temporary autonomy would be nothing more than a makeshift, a deferring of the whole question, and history shows conclusively that there is no attempted settlement so dangerous to ultimate peace as such a makeshift; a temporary autonomy such as Germany proposes. The only logical way to settle the matter is to sever completely the enforced, undesired and unnatural connection between the provinces and Germany, and return them, with as good grace as they can assume, to their natural place as part of France. There is no way of causing the self-expatriated inhabitants of Alsace-Lorraine, who fled rather than live under the Prussian rule, to return to it under an autonomy. In the United States, in England, and in France, there are half a million of Alsatians who would not consent to leave their adopted homes and new occupations for the doubtful opportunity of taking part in a plebiscite in the country of their birth. They know too well the touch of the...
